VOL. XXIII

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL., SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1916.

NO. 25

DEATH OF HENRY WARD BROWN

Hon. Henry Ward Brown, the veteran representative of the people of San Mateo county in the state assembly, died at the South San Francisco General Hospital on Friday morning, June 16th, after many months of intense suffering, the ailment which caused his death being of a cancerous nature.

Mr. Brown was born at Orland, Maine, in October, 1852. He came to California in 1875. Since then his home had always been in San Mateo county, but he had followed his profession, the practice of law, with offices in San Francisco. In 1892 he married Margaret Pauline McCullough, and she survives him.

He was a graduate of the Columbian (now George Washington) university of Washington, D. C., attended law school there and was admitted to the bar by the supreme court, District of Columbia, in 1875. After coming to California, he attended the Hastings Law School, university of California, from which he graduated in 1893. He was assistant and deputy United States surveyor of customs in San Francisco from 1880 to 1886 and deputy United States shipping commissioner there from 1889 to 1893.

He was elected to the state assembly from San Mateo county in 1898, and was re-elected in 1900 and again in 1902. He was out of the assembly for four years from 1904 to 1908. In 1908 he was again elected to the assembly and re-elected at each succeeding election to and including 1914, and was a member of the assembly at the time of his death.

Altogether his service as a representative of San Mateo county was for seven terms, or fourteen years in all, and he had reached the honorable distinction of dean of the state assembly.

Henry Ward Brown was a very loyal member of the national republican party. In the early years of his legislative career, in the years when the republican political machine dominated in the state, he was not infrequently an outspoken critic of party methods and procedure, and was by the bosses feared as an independent who could not be counted upon to "take program," but in later years, when the time of stress came and the very existence of the republican party in the state was imperiled, Henry Ward Brown came bravely to the front in the fight to save his party from defeat. In politics, as well as in his chosen profession, Henry Ward Brown scorned the tricks of the demagogue and the artifices of the pettifogger. As a high-minded man, he preferred to lose rather than win by deceit or dishonesty. At one time he was proffered the republican nomination as state senator for his district, but declined because it did not come through the regular and legitimate way. As a legislator he won a distinguished place as a foremost advocate of prison reform and as the staunch friend of measures for social and industrial improvement.

As a legislator, he aimed high and he reached his mark.

His page in California's annals is illuminated.

His loss is great and will be greatly mourned, and in the general grief all hearts will be filled with tender sorrow and sympathy for his gentle life companion, the one bereaved above all others.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2:15 p. m. from Cypress Lawn chapel.

Everybody come out to-night to greet the first performance of our new band.

A POPULAR LOCAL ENTERPRISE

The children of St. Paul's Methodist Church, headed by Miss Ruth Synder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Snyder, have started a fund for the procuring of a fine bell for the church. Their proposition is to secure a large, fine church bell which will answer the present exigencies and also meet the needs of the large permanent M. E. Church which is scheduled for the future. The first venture of the children met with success. They got up an amateur circus on the grounds of J. O. Snyder and charged a small admission, and while it was but little known, the children had a deal of fun and cleared $10.65 on the bell fund.

Brady Wolf, the roll designer of the Pacific Coast Steel Company, has submitted a proposition that if the children will pay for the material, he will make the pattern and mold the bell. This is a generous offer which will give the church a fine bell, the material being bought by the children and friends of the church in South San Francisco and made by one of our great South San Francisco industrial plants. This enterprise appeals to and is greatly appreciated by the entire church and community.

INJURED WORKMAN WINS $3000 SUITIN COURT OF APPEAL

Judge Buck's Judgment Sustained by Higher Court.

Frank H. Poor of South San Francisco recovered a verdict for three thousand ($3000) dollars for injuries to his left hand, before Judge Buck and a jury on October 9, 1913, against W. P. Fuller & Co., the large paint concern at South San Francisco.

John D. Willard of Redwood City and J. W. Coleberd of South San Francisco were attorneys for the injured workman, and Albert Raymond of the firm of Lilienthal, McKinstry & Raymond of San Francisco was attorney for the defendant.

After the plaintiff recovered judgment in the superior court of this county, the defendant appealed the case to the higher court on the ground that numerous mistakes were made during the trial of the case and on the further ground that Judge Buck should have granted the defendant a new trial.

The case was hotly contested and its trial consumed three days, and over a dozen witnesses testified in the case.

The higher court, in handing down its decision on June 5, 1916, disposed of many interesting legal points, and its opinion is, in part, as follows:

"This is an appeal by the defendant from a judgment in favor of plaintiff, and from an order denying a motion for a new trial, in an action for damages for personal injuries.

"The injuries to plaintiff for which damages are sought to be recovered were caused, it is alleged, by his being, through the negligence of the defendant, hit on the back of the left hand by a large box falling from a wooden chute which ran from the second to the first floor of defendant's warehouse, while the plaintiff was standing at the foot of the chute catching boxes as they descended thereon.

"There is no merit in the defendant's first point that the general demurrer to the first count should have been sustained for the reason that the complaint does not allege, directly or by implication, that the defendant, the employer, knew or ought to have known of the alleged defects. The complaint, as we have seen, alleges that the defendant negligently and carelessly and without due care directed the plaintiff to work at a place or with an appliance which was not safe. The defendant could not have been negligent or careless in the respects indicated in the complaint unless it knew, or with the exercise of reasonable diligence should have known of the defects of the place assigned to the plaintiff to work.

"The plaintiff was also allowed over objection to testify that on a prior occasion the chute had shifted, and that about fifteen minutes after the accident he observed the legs of the chute to be in bad condition. Questions eliciting this testimony were objected to, but it is clear that evidence of the condition of the place where plaintiff was injured within a reasonable time before or after the accident is admissible for the purpose of showing its condition at the time of the injury.

"The court gave a number of instructions at the request of the plaintiff to the effect that it was the duty of the employer to furnish his employees with a reasonably safe place to work, and with reasonably suitable and safe structures and appliances with which to do the assigned work. As before intimated, we think that under the allegations of the complaint and under the evidence introduced, such instructions were properly given; and this is tacitly at least conceded by two instructions given at the request of the defendant. Upon the latter's request the court upon this subject gave the following instruction: 'Under the pleadings in this case you cannot base your verdict in any degree upon any claim of plaintiff that the place in which he was working was safe or improper.' This instruction was erroneous, and was in conflict with other instructions on the same subject; but as it was given at the request of the defendant and was more favorable to it than it was entitled to have given, it would seem to follow that the defendant has no good ground of complaint. "There are other assigned errors, but a careful examination of the record discloses that appellant's contentions to them are without substantial merit, and that the case was fairly tried."

MAYOR ROLPH WANTS TO UNITE COUNTIES

Mayor Rolph has announced that, in line with his campaign declarations, he will send out early next week an invitation to the mayors of the cities in San Mateo county to confer with him on the matter of consolidation of the counties of San Mateo and San Francisco in a greater San Francisco.

The mayor said that he will attack the problem with the utmost enthusiasm and that he anticipates a reciprocal feeling from the other side of the county line. He pointed out that it would work to the mutual advantage of the two counties, making it possible to offer a fast electric car service to Peninsula residents, who would enjoy the delights of suburban residence and still be living in the city.

"I believe the people of San Mateo county who sincerely desire development will join with us in this campaign," said the mayor.

"Esmeralda"

Mary Pickford, the idol of the screen, in feature photoplay based on great human drama, "Esmeralda."

Mary Pickford, the idol of the screen, is presented in another photoplay that will increase her fame and popularity, if such a thing is remotely possible, in the Famous Players Film Company's four-part photoplay adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's great human drama, "Esmeralda," the latest release on the Paramount program at Royal Theatre, Thursday, June 22d.

Miss Pickford delineates this famous character-study with all the sweetness and tenderness that is illustriously hers. Mrs. Burnett, it will be remembered, is also the author of two other unusual Famous Players successes, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" and "The Pretty Sister of Jose," in the former of which "Little Mary" scored one of her greatest screen triumphs since "Tess of the Storm Country." In "Esmeralda" the gifted authoress has cleverly interwoven real pathos, simple and beautiful sentiment and a quaint originality and humor that will reach both the heart and the soul of people of all ages and temperaments, which the always charming and wonderful little star interprets in a manner at all times supreme.

Whether in Esmeralda's quiet, simple little home on the farm, or in the whirl of society's life in a large metropolis, she is the master of every situation with which the appealing drama confronts her. Not only because it is much unlike anything else she has ever done before, but also because of its humanness—its wonderful naturalness—"Esmeralda" will be remembered as one of Miss Pickford's foremost character creations.

The story is so generally well known that it is perhaps unnecessary to more than briefly indicate its motif. This is based upon the separation of the simple little Esmeralda and her sweetheart by the unexpected finding of a fortune in ore on the farm and the suddenly developed ambitions of her mother who becomes uncontrollably society-stricken when she learns of her wealth. Now Esmeralda is made to believe that her lover is dead, so that she can consent to marry a designing marquis and how the sudden arrival of her sweetheart interrupts the gorgeous wedding forms the climax of a story, forceful with the power of realism, but at all times quiet and simple in its construction as are the lives of the people it depicts themselves.

Capably directed by James Kirkwood and ably supported by Fuller Mellish as Esmeralda's father, Ida Waterman as the society-smitten mother, Arthur Hoops and other screen favorites, Mary Pickford succeeds in making of "Esmeralda" such a character that will linger in the memory of her admirers as long as has the other of her memorable impersonations.

THE JITNEY

The most serious situation that has confronted railway interests in California has been brought about by the horde of jitney buses that are blocking traffic in the larger cities and cutting into the already small profits of the big electric and steam railroads of the state.

It is a condition that threatens future development and places millions of dollars' worth of invested capital in jeopardy.

In San Francisco the business of the Market street merchants is being ruined. It is taking one's life in one's hand to attempt to cross the street. In Los Angeles the street car companies are losing thousands monthly.

It is the great railroad interests, the developers of the state, that must be protected. They and their allied interests are furnishing the highest class of employment to skilled labor.

The jitney bus is to the passenger traffic business what the peddler is to the merchandising house.

The jitney is neither an establishment nor an institution.

These passenger traffic peddlers set up a great howl at the suggestion that they are a menace to the legitimate common carriers.

That the common carriers, such as the street car lines and electric and steam railroads, with a few hundred millions invested, also have rights, does not seem to disturb the jitney man in the least.

But let some other equally irresponsible thing on wheels come along and threaten the business of the jitney, and there would be another tale to tell.

"I've got a right to live" never had much strength as an argument. The professional highwayman can employ it just as well as anybody.

The jitney has its field, but it is not in localities where there are passenger carrying facilities.

It should not be tolerated on streets already provided with cars, any more than any other car company should be allowed to lay tracks there.

The jitney can perform a real service by operating in sections not provided with street cars or electric or steam lines. In that case they would build up rather than tear down.

To permit jitneys to operate on streets over which a franchise has already been granted is not fair to the interests which have invested millions, and it is not good law.

If the company's franchise is worth anything, it is worth the protection of the municipality.

The jitney is without responsibility. The driver can work to-day and lay off to-morrow. If he doesn't like rainy weather he can stay in his barn. If there is a dull period he can lay off or quit entirely. He loses nothing, for he can go to work at something else.

But what happens if a street railway line lays off for even a day, or for a few hours? It loses its franchise. It must run, even if to do so is a loss.

It isn't fair.

The time will come when municipalities will awaken to the fact that they are hampering the business of these large interests, with enormous investments, and jeopardizing the business of the merchants on those thoroughfares made almost impassable by the flying, irresponsible gnats.

When that day comes, the jitney will be swatted and swatted hard.

The jitney man has, of course, the right to live, but not at the expense of invested rights.

The street car employees must also be accorded the right to live. Poor business on the street car lines means less pay for the operatives.—Byron Times.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

The board of supervisors met in regular session on Monday, June 12th, at Redwood City.

The minutes of the meetings of May 18th and of June 5th were read and approved.

The report of County Auditor J. J. Shields, showing the aggregate amount of allowances that can be made against the several funds of the county for the month of June, was read and ordered filed.

A communication was received from Durley & Co., bond and investment brokers of Los Angeles, asking for information relative to contemplated improvements of roads in San Mateo county, with a view of obtaining road district bonds.

The clerk was directed to reply to the communication and inform the above parties that the roads in the county were practically completed.

On recommendation of Surveyor Neuman and on motion of Supervisor MacBain, seconded by Supervisor Thompson, the oiling contract on the new La Honda road from Folgers to the summit of the mountain was ordered accepted.

Supervisor MacBain presented and read the following deductions in the plans and specifications for the new county jail:

1. That the concrete floors now specified and shown for the second tier of cell work, including all floor space of exercise corridor, cells and guards' corridor, be omitted.

2. That all plumbing fixtures now shown for the second tier of cell work, including finished work for showers, also the fixtures in the guards' toilet and one hose reel, to be omitted, but it does not omit the roughing in for all of this work. Said roughing in for the above-mentioned fixtures must be done according to the original plans and specifications, with all pipes properly installed, tapped and vented.

3. Omit all electric wiring shown in the second tier of cells, leaving an outlet and a main conduit for future work and connecting lights. Rough in for the telephone, annunciator and push switch as shown on plans, but eliminate the fixtures.

4. Omit the painting of all cell and corridor work where shown in the second tier of cells and corridor gratings. Rough in for steam radiators in second tier of cells, but omit the setting of the steam radiators.

The above changes in the specifications amount to $1256. Deducting this amount from the lowest bid submitted, $43,563, that of Newsom & Henning, left the contract price $43,563.

The changes and deductions in the plans and specifications having been agreed upon by Newsom & Henning, the contract was thereupon awarded to them on motion of Supervisor MacBain, seconded by Supervisor Brown, the payments on the contract to begin after July 1, 1916.

Several changes and omissions in the original plans and specifications for the cell work of the new jail having been presented by Supervisor MacBain, it was ordered, on his motion, seconded by Supervisor Brown, that the clerk readvertise for new bids for the above work, the bids to be opened July 10, 1916.

H. C. Tuchsén, trustee of Redwood City, addressed the board and asked that the county stand its share of the expense in connection with the installation of a number of storm culverts on the county road within the incorporated limits of Redwood, made necessary on account of the construction of the concrete shoulders on either side of the highway.

On motion of Supervisor MacBain, seconded by Supervisor Brown, it was ordered that the county pay its pro rata of the above work, Mr. Tuchsén to secure the necessary bids.

On motion of Supervisor Brown, seconded by Supervisor MacBain, the following claims were ordered referred to County Auditor Shields to ascertain if figures are correct:

City of San Bruno, $1309.83, being the amount of the second installment of 1915 taxes for the San Bruno lighting district; town of Redwood City, $1092.65, the amount due for the delinquent taxes collected by the county of San Mateo.

WE SHOULD EAT MORE DRIED FRUITS

In these days when preparedness and economy are being preached from every side, Professor M. E. Jaffa, consulting nutrition expert of the California state board of health, calls attention to the high food value of dried fruits. During the coming winter, the fruits which are now ripening will be of great value in their dried form and should be eaten in much larger quantities.

Dried figs, apples, raisins, apricots, prunes and dates are wholesome foods which build tissue and yield energy. The chief nutritive element in dried fruits generally is sugar, which is the most easily digested and assimilated of all the carbohydrates. Since sugar is one of the most important factors in producing muscular energy for the body, the high nutritive value of dried fruits must be well appreciated. Raisins, prunes and apples are particularly high in sugar, and, according to Professor Jaffa, these form an ideal portion of the diet.

The salts and organic acids found in dried fruits also have hygienic and medicinal value and the mineral ingredients are most important. Professor Jaffa says that it matters not whether it was instinct or knowledge that led man to combine nuts and fruits—the result is a happy one.

The new band will lead the visiting steel workers along our streets this evening at 6 o'clock.

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT PARTY

On Wednesday evening the pupils of the local high school congregated in mask at the high school building. Many grotesque costumes were worn, and cowboys, Spanish señoritas, flower girls, Charlie Chaplin and Solomon Levi danced around and played games, for which prizes were given.

At 12 o'clock everybody adjourned to their respective homes, having enjoyed a very good time together.

Friday afternoon several of the pupils of the high school went en masse to Recreation Park in San Francisco, where they enjoyed the baseball game between Oakland and Salt Lake, Oakland winning 2 to 0.

FRATERNAL ORDERS

Tippecanoe Tribe, No. 111, Red Men.

One of the largest gatherings in the wigwam of Tippecanoe Tribe, No. 111, Improved Order of Red Men, will take place the last of this moon. Several stalwart American citizens who, possessing for the fraternity a great veneration and hearing of all the virtues possessed by the order and what care and attention the members as well as the widows and orphans are receiving, have decided to cast their lot with this organization. The dispensation now open will be the last for many moons to come, so hunt up a paleface and help him to enjoy the luxuries of fraternal love.

No order should appeal to the public as does the Improved Order of Red Men, which is distinctively a patriotic order, founded with the birth of the republic. At times like the present, every member naturally feels a just pride in his affiliation. If there ever was an organization that prides itself on its American patriotic tendencies, it is this order.

The citizens of San Francisco and vicinity have selected July 8th as the day in which all will turn out to show their favor and interest in the matter of preparedness. Civic, military, fraternal, labor and all other bodies will turn out.

Every tribe that possibly can will have a float in line. A dispensation has been granted to each tribe to wear costumes or regalia, whichever they so desire. Only turn out and march with the great sachem.

The brave man is not he who feels no fear, for that were brutish and irrational, but he whose noble soul its fear subdues and bravely dares the danger nature shirks from.

Everybody come out to-night to greet the first performance of our new band.

Very Considerate.

One rather cool evening the good minister of a certain church was eloquently addressing his congregation on the beauty of leading an upright life, when he suddenly paused, glanced round the building and beckoned to the sexton.

"Jones," said he, as the sexton approached the pulpit, "open a couple of windows on each side of the church, please."

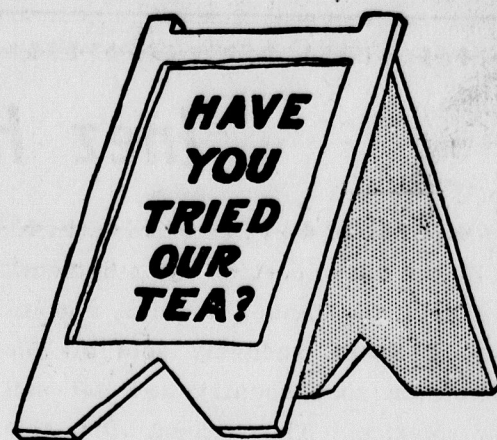

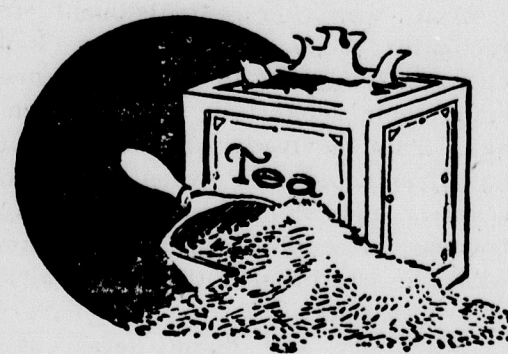

"I beg your pardon, sir," returned the sexton, with a look of surprise. "Did I understand you to say open the windows?"

"Yes," was the cold, hard rejoinder of the minister. "It is not healthy to sleep with the windows shut!"

Inez Herrera

In the early part of the nineteenth century Don Manuel Herrera, a grandee of Spain, suddenly sold all his effects in that country and set sail for Mexico. The reason for this change of residence was that Don Manuel's daughter, Inez, a girl of fifteen, had become infatuated with Jose Alvarez, a young man whose reputation was none of the best. Alvarez, though but twenty-five years of age, had already been a leader of several uprisings against the government, and his methods indicated not only a turbulent disposition, but that he was conscienceless. By changing his residence from the old to the new world Don Manuel hoped to rid his daughter of such a suitor.

Don Manuel, on arriving in Mexico, purchased a ranch in the state of Durango, near the base of the Sierra Madre chain of mountains. On the property he built a handsome residence and became an influential citizen of the country. His wife, who had been loath to quit Spain, left her heart there. But Inez took kindly to the new country. Young as she was, she had had no taste of the formal life led by the higher classes in Spain and delighted in the freedom she was accorded in Mexico.

Inez had not been in her new home long before she was considered the best horsewoman in the state. She grew very fond of hunting and, though living in a country more or less subject to lawlessness, did not fear to go anywhere alone. This her father permitted because he could not prevent it, though so great was her popularity among those living in the vicinity of her home that he felt she was always in a measure protected. Added to this, she was always well armed.

Among Inez's many suitors was Miguel Coral, a young man who had when he came of age inherited a hacienda near that of the Herreras. He was as much in favor with Don Manuel as Jose Alvarez had been in disfavor. Coral was the soul of honor, and Don Manuel did not hesitate to trust Inez with him anywhere. Time and absence seemed to have cured her of her infatuation for Jose. At any rate she never mentioned him and turned a not unwilling ear to Miguel. In the hunting season Inez was fond of riding up among the foothills of the mountains for game, and Miguel was often her attendant on these excursions. This was permitted not because Mexican etiquette allowed a young girl to go off with a man alone, but because Inez had a code of etiquette of her own. What she did another could not do, and much of what others did she disdained to do, for keeping girls under watch tends to make them deceitful.

When the Herreras had lived in Mexico eight years and soon after a revolution which had been unsuccessful, the Sierra Madre mountains became the lair of a band of robbers, who made occasional descents upon the people of Durango, each time carrying off booty or levying contributions of money. Every ranch or hacienda that was worth plundering except that of Don Manuel Herrera was robbed. Why he was left immune while others far less promising of plunder were attacked was a mystery.

One thing, and one only, was known about the band. It was composed of persons that had been engaged in the unsuccessful revolution in the City of Mexico. It was reported that their leader had been one of the lieutenants of the leader of the insurgents, and some said that he was the leader himself. At any rate but few of the insurgents were captured; but, being hunted for their lives, most of them took to inaccessible points and lived by robbery.

In the autumn Inez was eager to go up into the hunting grounds. Her father objected to her going. The lair of the robbers was supposed to be in the region where she usually hunted, but they had been quiet for some time, and it was surmised that, having all they could get from Durango, they had gone elsewhere. Inez, who seemed to have a fancy for danger, started on horseback one morning alone to spend the day at her favorite sport. Besides her rifle she carried pistols in her holster and a knife.

Having attained a considerable height, she was riding on a plateau when she met a horseman coming toward her. He was dressed in the costume of a Mexican gentleman, including the gaudy trappings. Bringing her rifle to a position which would enable her to use it readily, Inez rode on. The man drew rein a few paces from the point of meeting. She, too, stopped.

What was her astonishment to recognize Jose Alvarez. He had changed somewhat in his appearance since their separation, but not from age. That devil-may-care look that had fascinated her when she had scarcely budded into womanhood had become intensified. And Inez saw what she was blind to then—the spirit of evil in him.

"What are you doing here?" she asked, biting her lip to maintain her courage.

"I came here because you are here. I cannot live without you."

His voice was soft and smooth, that same voice in which he had made love to her in Spain. It caused her bosom to rise and fall more quickly than from fear.

"You have lived eight years without me."

"You were a child when we parted. I could not rely on one so young. Now you are a woman."

"As a woman I shall not act as a child."

"Then you no longer love me?" She hesitated. She did not know whether she did or did not. Her heart was fluttering.

"You are mine. You were born to be mine. You shall be mine."

There was something in his looks, his tone of voice, when he said this that excited not exactly fear, but a realization that she had to deal with one who might make trouble for others, if not herself. She was drawing quicker breaths, but said nothing. Emboldened by her silence, he continued:

"I am going with you to your father to demand your hand."

"And suppose he refuses you?"

"You will not fail me."

Inez felt that this was an evasion. Something in the man told her that he was changed from what she had believed him to be when she was a girl. He had been sinking morally from what he had been then, and though she knew nothing of this descent she felt the difference. She was not afraid of him for herself, but for others. The image of Miguel Coral came up before her, and between him and this man she had loved so passionately she saw a great difference. She dreaded a meeting between them. She concluded to show Jose that all was over between him and her, trusting that he would leave her and those she feared for in peace.

"Jose," she said, "my love for you was that of a child. As a woman I will never be yours. I am going home. Good-bye."

She said this resolutely, at the same time riding on. She did not look back. Had she done so she would have seen him start to follow her, then change his mind and turn away.

When a bad man, a reckless man, is in love there is no knowing what he will do. We constantly read in the daily journals of such men killing the women they love, then themselves. Jose Alvarez's love that had been no great passion for the child was fanned into a flame at meeting her again as a woman. He cared nothing for his life, and he was ready to take any chance to gain his ends. It was his disposition to do desperate deeds that had fascinated her as a child. He believed that he could play the same game with her as a woman.

One day Don Manuel, his wife, his daughter and others of the household were sitting on the veranda of the house when a horseman rode up to the gate, dismounted and came up the walk to the house. Inez recognized Jose Alvarez at once. The others did not recognize him till he had reached the veranda and, holding his conical hat in his hand, addressed Don Manuel:

"Senor, I am Jose Alvarez. When your daughter was budding into womanhood you refused her to me. Now that she is a woman and capable of deciding for herself I have come to ask you for her."

"There is no need," said Inez, rising and confronting him, "for you to ask my father for me, for you have my own answer refusing you."

It was evident that his bold stroke was not successful. But he had not hoped for success at once. He was about to speak again when all were startled by a shot. Alvarez paused and clapped his hand to a pistol at his side. From every direction men were seen converging upon the house. When they came nearer all were seen to be carrying rifles in a position for immediate use. In advance of the others was Miguel Coral, and he seemed to be their leader.

Alvarez understood what this meant, though the others with him did not. He knew that it was a matter of life and death with him, or rather the kind of a death he should die, for if these men who were coming took him—and their taking him was inevitable—he would be executed for a felon, and he was thinking of taking his own life. Raising a pistol to his head, he looked a farewell to Inez. That look prevented his intended action. Don Manuel, who was now beside him and slightly in his rear, knocked the weapon from his hand.

Those coming closed in on Alvarez and seized him.

"What does it all mean?" asked Don Manuel.

"This man," replied Miguel, "recently led a revolution in the City of Mexico to depose the president and put himself in his place. The movement was a lamentable failure, but its leader escaped and with a number of his men took to the mountains above us, and it is they who have been robbing us. Recently I organized a force to hunt them down. We were in the mountains watching an opportunity to bag them when one of our men saw this one about to descend the mountain and recognized him, having been robbed by him. We followed him and tracked him here."

"What are you going to do with him?" asked Inez excitedly.

"Take him to the capital."

"Jose," she continued, "if I can save you will you promise to quit Mexico never to return?"

"Inez," sternly said her father, "you cannot save him"; then to the others, "Take him away."

Alvarez was taken to Mexico, where he was executed by the garrote. Most of his band, deprived of their leader, were captured. Inez was kept in ignorance of the fate of the man she formerly loved. Indeed, she never asked what had become of him, for she married Miguel Coral.

Remember the band concert tonight.

So He Would.

The keeper was feeding the pythons. Several live rabbits were tossed into the cage and were immediately and greedily seized by the reptiles. The struggling rabbits, although seemingly almost as large as the snakes, were swallowed whole one after another.

The ghastly sight prompted the scholarly looking man to exclaim, "Gross, eh, keeper?" The keeper turned a glance of scorn upon the professor.

"Yes, and you'd 'a' grew some, too, if you'd et all that livestock, I guess."

Japanese Needlewomen.

The daughters of the land of flowers sometimes curiously reverse European methods. They needle their thread instead of threading their needles, and instead of running their needle through the cloth they hold it still and run the cloth upon it. An English lady long resident in Tokyo once wrote to a friend that the impulse of her Japanese maids is always to sew on cuff frills and other things topsy turvy and inside out.

Valley of the Jordan.

The valley of the Jordan constitutes the deepest depression on the face of the earth, the Sea of Galilee itself being over 700 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, while the Dead Sea is over 1300 feet below the level of all the oceans of the world.

What the Peruvians Believed.

A unique idea of the future state was that of the ancient Peruvians. As the disembodied soul winged its way to eternity it encountered two rocks, upon one of which it must needs rest. The choice was determined by the morality of the life in the flesh. If it rested upon the left-hand rock it was instantly translated to "Po," or oblivion, a state analogous to the Nirvana of the orient. If through early misdeeds, however, the unhappy spirit was guided to the right-hand rock it entered into a purgatorial hell where fiends grated away the flesh from all the bones in succession, after which the skeleton was reclothed and sent back to earth for another try. There was no haste about this grating process. It took something over 10,000 years.

EXHIBITS AT LOCAL SCHOOLS.

Manual training and domestic science exhibits were held in the local schools yesterday. Drawings and painting were also shown, along with the various manual arts performed by the pupils of the lower grades.

Under the guidance of A. Kleemeyer, manual training instructor and teacher of the eighth grade, the pupils succeeded in producing some very good pieces of furniture and adornments for the home, ranging from a large wall book-rack to a small match-holder.

Much credit is due to Miss A. Bromley, teacher of domestic science, for the handiwork performed by the girls. Many beautiful dresses, aprons, etc., were completed, and the girls of the graduating class made their own commencement gowns.

Miss Diggles, the drawing teacher of both the high and grammar schools, has shown wonderful ability in the teaching of this art, and as a result sketches and paintings were made by the scholars which show the effort employed in their development.

Among the other exhibits were the little raffia hats and paper furniture and houses made by the lower grade pupils under the direction of their teachers.

The Prettiest Feet.

A Swiss professor states that not one woman in a score has a perfect foot, owing to the wearing of high-heeled boots and pointed toes. Russian, German, American, Austrian and Dutch women, he says, have broad feet, while those of English women are too narrow to fulfill classical and healthy conditions. The women of the Latin races, excluding French women, have the best formed and therefore the prettiest foot, the professor says.

A Strange Situation.

"Humor is a very funny thing," said Binks.

"It ought to be," said the philosopher.

"Oh, I don't mean that way," said Binks. "I mean that it is a strange thing. Now, I can't speak French, but I can always understand a French joke, and I can speak English, but I'm blessed if I can see an English joke."

"Most people are," said the philosopher.

"Are what?" said Binks. "Blessed if they can see an English joke," said the philosopher. "It is a sign of an unusually keen vision."
